

---

Divorce App UK

Published on: 2026-07-26

Divorcify helps you organise divorce and family court applications, evidence, hearings, directions, orders and important dates in one secure divorce app.

Divorce and family court proceedings can generate a considerable amount of information. Applications, evidence, hearing dates, court directions and orders can quickly become difficult to manage.

Divorcify is a divorce organisation app designed to bring this information together. It helps applicants and respondents prepare for family court proceedings and keep track of what needs to happen next.

Keep your case in one place

Divorcify provides a guided workspace for organising different parts of your case, including:

- divorce
- child arrangements
- financial remedy proceedings
- court applications
- evidence
- hearings
- directions and deadlines
- court orders

Instead of relying on separate emails, paper folders and notes, you can create a structured record of your case.

Organise your evidence

Divorcify allows you to upload relevant evidence, including:

- PDFs
- emails and messages
- screenshots
- photographs
- audio and video
- call logs
- other case documents

Uploaded PDF files are searchable, helping you locate information when preparing for an appointment or hearing.

Divorcify can also compile your information and exhibits into a PDF that can be shared with a solicitor, barrister or support organisation.

Not every document will be relevant or appropriate for court. Where necessary, obtain legal advice about what evidence should be used and how it should be presented.

Build your chronology automatically

A chronology is an ordered record of significant events and dates. It can help a solicitor or the court understand how a case has developed.

As you add information to Divorcify, the divorce app automatically builds a chronology from the events you record. This saves you from having to reconstruct important dates later from messages, emails and documents.

You remain responsible for checking that the information is accurate and relevant before sharing it.

Track hearings, directions and orders

Family court cases can involve several hearings and numerous instructions from the court.

Divorcify helps you record:

- upcoming hearing dates
- important case milestones
- directions made by the court
- tasks that need to be completed
- relevant deadlines
- interim and final orders

The app tracks your progress through each stage and records completed milestones, giving you a clearer view of how your case is progressing.

Always check the official court order when confirming exactly what the court requires.

Prepare documents and statements

Divorcify uses plain-English prompts to help you capture facts, organise records, build statements and assemble exhibits.

Its video, audio and written guides explain what to expect during different parts of the divorce and family court process. These features are intended to help you prepare, particularly if you are unfamiliar with court terminology and procedures.

Divorcify does not write your evidence for you or decide what position you should take.

Keep control of your information

Your Divorcify information is stored on your device and protected using a PIN or biometric access.

If you choose to use Google Drive or iCloud, your information can be backed up within your own account. Divorcify states that the files do not pass through its systems.

You control when information is compiled and shared with a solicitor, barrister, charity or other professional.

Who is Divorcify for?

Divorcify may help:

- people considering separation
- applicants and respondents in family court proceedings
- litigants in person managing their own case
- people working with a solicitor
- professionals and charities supporting separating families

You do not need legal training to use the app. Its prompts and guidance are written for people who may be encountering the family court for the first time.

Does Divorcify provide legal advice?

No. Divorcify is an organisational and preparation tool, not a solicitor.

It cannot:

- provide personalised legal advice
- represent you in court
- interpret an order for you

- decide which evidence should be submitted
- predict the outcome of your case
- replace urgent legal or safeguarding support

Its purpose is to help you remain organised, prepare information and make better use of any professional support you receive.

Bring structure to your family court case

Managing a divorce or family court application can feel overwhelming when important information is spread across different places.

Divorcify brings your applications, evidence, hearings, directions, orders and key dates into one guided workspace. It helps you understand what you have recorded, what requires attention and what you may need to prepare next.

Divorcify provides organisational tools, general guidance and document-preparation support. It does not provide legal, financial, medical or safeguarding advice. Seek appropriate professional assistance where an adult or child may be at risk or urgent action may be required.